

YOU HAVE A CHOICE

There is a school in Watts where you can...

- Learn through challenging projects, real life internships.
- Use computers every day for creating presentations, building your own web site, doing research and communicating with others.
- Enjoy a smaller community where staff and students know your name and people are valued by their contributions not the brand of their clothing
- Prepare for both college and a career; learn the skills that employers want and that will help you be successful at college.
- Take electives or sports at David Starr Jordan High School-Home of the Bulldogs! We're Bulldogs too!

A

I feel learning to work with others as a team is an important skill for my future.	I really don't like to work with others and will avoid it whenever possible.
I like to know I am learning something that is relevant to me and has use in the 'real' world. I often ask "why do we have to learn this stuff?"	I prefer to do simple tasks like worksheets and chapter questions and don't think too much about the how's and why's of what I am learning.
I like to be in an environment that challenges me and pushes me to improve myself and my community.	I am happy getting C's and just enjoys doing the things I like to do. I prefer to "just do what I must to get by."
I'd like to do a "real" world internship in an area that matches my career interests.	I think internships are a waste of time... I'd rather get paid for what I do.
I'm ready to be treated more like an adult professional and take more responsibility for my learning.	I'm probably not ready to be responsible for my own learning or handle major projects.
I think learning can be fun and it is possible to work hard and have fun at the same time.	I think work and play are opposites that don't mix.
I think I would like a small school that has fewer social "cliques." I want a school where I can be myself and be accepted.	I like the social opportunities and course options of a big school. I prefer to be more anonymous on campus and only hang out with my select friends.
